JUNEAU

"THE GOLD BELT CITY"

Juneau, the capital city of Alaska, is also the metropolis of the great territory, not only in population, but in commerce and industry as well.

and is the banking center of the country. The city is situated on the east shore of Gastineau channel, at the head of navigation for ocean going vessels. Juneau is perhaps the most compact city in America. The population has been conservatively placed at 4,000.

Juneau is backed by natural resources such as few communities can boast. The gifts of nature consist in large part of immense mineral zones carrying gold and other metals, large areas of valuable timber, tremendous water power potentialities, coal lands, waters teeming with all kinds of food fishes, agricultural lands, an abundant supply of game, scenic attractions, an equable climate, and unlimited opportunities for water transportation. Development of some of these resources, notably the gold mining and salmon fishing industries, has made considerable progress, and is attracting a great deal of attention.

Within the past two years Juneau commenced to modernize by substituting enduring concrete for wood structures in the business section and many substantial buildings have been erected. During the period mentioned upwards of $1,500,000 was expended in new building in town. Extensive street improvements were also made.

The commerce of Juneau shows a wonderful increase within the past few years. The imports from the States for the year 1911 amounted to $655,182, and for the year 1914 reached a total of $4,017,710. Machinery and supplies for the big mining developments and building materials for the town contributed largely to the marked increase. The waterfront from Juneau to Thane, a distance of over three miles, now punctuated at intervals with wharves and warehouses where freight is disposed of by the regular carriers to this place. On an average ocean going vessels arrive at the Municipal wharf with cargo each month, and 40 vessels call, including those southbound from points east and west. In addition there are three regular lines of steamers and several tramp freighters that call at the Pacific Coast Company pier.

There are three banks in Juneau, including the Juneau branch of the First Territorial Bank of Douglas, and they have ample facilities for transacting a much larger business than offers; yet the showing would be considered very satisfactory by many cities of the State, having a much larger population than Juneau. Excluding the transactions for the Federal government and the business of the savings departments, the bank clearings for Juneau for the year 1914 reached a total of $26,039,686.49.

The larger industries on which Juneau depends are at present mining and fishing. The payrolls for the Alaska Gastineau and the Alaska Juneau mining companies alone aggregate $150,000 monthly. Tributaries to Juneau are several smaller mines with good payrolls. There are several salmon canneries in Juneau, but halibut fishers make it their home shipping port and the town is the trade center for several of the Southeastern Alaska salmon packers. The salmon pack of last season for Southeastern Alaska amounted to 1,789,031 cases out of a total of 4,067,832 for the Territory, or nearly half of the entire catch, which was valued $19,719,942. More than half of the Southeastern Alaska catch was packed in canneries situated near Juneau.

Public Utilities

A private corporation furnishes the municipality and all its inhabitants with light, and sells power for general purposes about town. Another private corporation furnishes the city with ice cold water from springs located in the valley of Gold Creek at an altitude that gives a high pressure to the mains in the business section. A modern telephone system is operated by a private corporation and has long distance connections with Salmon Creek, Thane, Perseverance, Douglas and Treadwell. An interurban ferry service of a high standard is maintained by a private corporation. Communication with the world is afforded by the U. S. cable service and also by wireless.

The municipality owns and operates the principal wharf in Juneau and also maintains a municipal coal yard. Two years ago, in order to encourage the shipping of halibut from this port, the city made a general contract with a cold storage company which, resulted in the erection of a modern cold storage plant that has been in continuous operation since it was established. It has a freezing capacity of 18,000 pounds daily and a storage room for 150,000 pounds of fish.

Institutions

The city schools are representative American institutions. Students graduating from the high school department are entitled to entry in the leading universities of the Pacific Coast States.

A well patronized public library is maintained by popular subscription.

There is a splendid hospital maintained and managed by the Sisters of St. Ann. The institution recently moved into its handsome new home, which was erected at a cost of $60,000.

Church denominations having their own buildings for worship include the Christian Science, Presbyterian, Methodist, Episcopalian, Roman Catholic and Greek Catholic.

Fraternal orders include Masons, Odd Fellows, Elks, Moose, Knights of Columbus, Order Eastern Star, Rebeccas, Pioneers of Alaska and Arctic Brotherhood.

There are several social organizations and societies for the advancement of the intellectual side of life.

City Government

Like other cities of first class in Alaska, Juneau's government is practically of the commission form. Seven councilmen elected annually are charged with the responsibility of conducting the city's municipal affairs, and also the schools with the aid of a board of directors chosen by the people at the regular elections in April. The council appoints or elects all administrative officials, which include the mayor, clerk and magistrate, police chief and force, fire chief and force, and city wharfinger.

The city recently established a fire department with a part of the fire-fighting crew constantly on duty and under pay.
