

City of Ketchikan

KETCHIKAN, "The First City." Ketchikan is a town of thriving industry, good homes, churches, schools, societies and lodges. Its population, estimated at 5100, is made up of Caucasians, with some native Indians and a few Orientals. It is a town that has never known a boom of any kind, yet has shown a steady and healthy growth, gradually increasing in wealth and population.

Located on the west coast of Revillagigedo Island, between the 55th and 56th degrees of latitude, and between the 131st and 132nd degrees of longitude Ketchikan is readily accessible to the states, the port being open 365 days in the year, and on the regular lines of steamships from Seattle and Vancouver to all points to the north and westward. It is approximately 48 hours by water from Ketchikan to Seattle, and is but seven hours by steamer from the western terminus of the Canadian Grand Trunk Railway.

The Port—Statistics of the treasury department show that Ketchikan is the leading port of Alaska. Approximately 92 per cent of all the vessels entering and clearing in the territory do so at the port of Ketchikan. It is the central distributing point for a large surrounding area in which are located salmon canneries, mines, lumber camps, fox farms and salteries.

Fresh Fisheries—While the Ketchikan district, comprising an area of 10,000 square miles, has diversified industries, as set forth above, it is a fact that the chief of these, the one which far outstrips all others at the present time, is the fisheries. And this industry is divided into four parts: fresh fish, frozen fish, canned fish and salt fish.

The fresh fish business consists of packing in ice fresh halibut, salmon, sable fish and cod, and shipping them to the markets of the south and east. And a promising outlook is presented for the shipment of fresh herring. Great quantities of herring are caught in the waters adjacent to Ketchikan, despite the fact that few are shipped out as a food product. Practically all of the herring caught in Ketchikan district are frozen for use as bait by the halibut fishermen.

The frozen fish industry is also for the freezing of salmon, halibut and all other varieties of fresh fish found in the waters of the North Pacific, which products are then kept in cold storage until market conditions are such that the demand is greater than the supply of the fresh product, when the frozen article is readily salable.

For the handling of this fresh and frozen fish, Ketchikan is provided with two large cold storage plants, the total compressor capacity of which is 410 tons; the sharp freezer capacity, 280,000 pounds every 36 hours, and the total storage capacity of which is 7,500,000 pounds. Also, these plants will manufacture 100 tons of ice daily, and combined they have an ice storage capacity of 3000 tons. Both plants are operated by hydro-electric power. In addition to these there are several other fish docks where fresh fish are packed for quick consumption and shipment.

The halibut industry is tremendous in itself, with Ketchikan the headquarters for a considerable fleet of vessels which ply the waters of the north for this most delectable of delicacies. Halibut are deep sea fish and are taken from the banks off the shores of Alaska, from Dixon's Entrance to the Aleutian Islands. These fishing vessels are well built and powerful, going sometimes more than 1500 miles. Their fish are cleaned and iced down immediately after being caught, and are landed in port within ten days, when they are again packed for shipment or frozen. The work of the halibut fisherman is hard and hazardous, but except for infrequent periods when market conditions are bad, he is generally well paid for his product.

Vessels, many in number, and manned by 1200 to 1500 fishermen, troll for King salmon, winter and summer. Their catch is quite properly named, for the King salmon is the most beautiful and delightful fish that swims the waters of the earth. In addition to trolling being a sizeable industry in itself, it is also one of the greatest outdoor sports, as any disciple of Isaak Walton may readily understand that nothing better could be asked for than to have a game fish weighing from 30 to 80 pounds at the end of his line and fighting for life. These salmon, besides those shipped out iced down, fresh, are used for mild-cure packs; that is, salted in barrels. Also, a great many Silver salmon, caught mostly in fishtraps or by seiners, are packed by the mildcurers.

Salmon Canneries—During the season of 1923, in this district, thirty-one canneries, of which seven are within the corporate limits of the city of Ketchikan, will be in operation. Owing to the scarcity of seasonable labor, some of the canneries import from the states part of their crews, but they also give employment to all in town who wish to engage in that work. Practically all of the men operating the boats and other gear of the fisheries in the Ketchikan section are residents of Southeastern Alaska.

The Ketchikan district, in a mining way, is not as active now as it has been in some years of the past, owing to the increased cost of commodities and labor. The area, however, is highly mineralized with copper, gold, silver, iron and other metals and it will be but a question of time until the properties are opened up. There are several properties in operation now and some others in the course of development and practically all of these are being worked by residents of the district and not by outside capital, whereby it is shown that the home folks have confidence in the outlook.

The Portland Canal district, which is immediately contiguous to Ketchikan, is drawing the attention of the whole mining world. It is there that the great Premier Mine, but 60 miles from Ketchikan as the crow flies, is located. It is a gold and silver proposition. This property, bought three years ago for a nominal sum, has already paid three and one-quarter millions in dividends and it is said that they have many times that amount in sight. In addition to that property there are others in the same section which are in such a state of development that they will be producing on a large scale in the near future, it is believed.

Timber, Lumber and Products—Ketchikan is the very heart of the great Tongass National Forest which covers approximately 15,000,000 acres. This is heavily forested with spruce, hemlock and cedar. This is being marketed and has been for many years for home consumption. The summer of 1922 marked a new epoch in the industry, however, when for the first time a cargo of several million feet was shipped to Australia. This was the beginning of an export business which will, it is indicated, increase materially in the next few years as the buyers are now negotiating for a considerable amount of lumber for export.

In the city of Ketchikan there are two saw mills which provide lumber not only for local consumption, one of which started the export trade, but they also furnish the boxes for the salmon canneries and for the fresh fish shippers of the whole district.

There has been much talk during recent years of the development of pulp and paper manufacturing plants in Southeastern Alaska. While only one pulp mill has actually been started in the Tongass National Forest, several applications for permits to develop power sites which the applicants say are for pulp and paper mills, are now before the federal government. There is no question that the Tongass National Forest furnishes a field for these, with its vast areas and ready accessibility to transportation, all being located right on the water's edge where steamers of any draught may navigate. In this connection, it is worthy of note that Revillagigedo Island, on which Ketchikan is located, offers approximately 100,000 horsepower in its undeveloped water sites. These, no doubt, will one day, and not in the distant future, be utilized. It has even been said on competent authority that it would not be a difficult engineering problem to harness at least half of these power sites for use in a central location, if at any time it should be deemed advisable to build one large plant.

With the lumber export business and the pulp and paper industry in mind, it is certain that the forests will ultimately furnish material for employment for thousands and an opportunity for capital. It is officially estimated by the foresters that Alaska can produce two million tons of paper annually and for all time, with proper reforestation.

The city business is made up of three substantial department stores, a wholesale grocery house, two large cold storage plants, seven canneries, several miles of waterfront with dock facilities for the largest vessels engaged in the coasting trade, fish houses and salteries, two daily newspapers, one of which is a member of the Associated Press; big oil tanks of two of leading companies which are supplied by tank steamers direct from the oil fields; bakeries; a first class automobile service station to cater to the 181 machines in town; several large machine shops and a marine ways to overhaul the fishing fleets; several substantial and first class hotels, many grocery stores, hardware stores, pharmacies, ship chandleries, fur, jewelry and curio shops, haberdasheries and clothing establishments. Then it is the headquarters for the United States lighthouse service in Alaska, which has a depot here from which it operates its lighthouse tenders. The supervisor of the Tongass National Forest maintains his offices here, as does the bureau of immigration, and the collector of customs is represented by an office with three deputy collectors.

There are four churches in Ketchikan, the Methodist, Episcopal, Catholic and Presbyterian and the Seventh Day Adventists are preparing to build a house of worship. In addition to these, there is a Christian Science society which meets regularly but as yet has no edifice of its own. The Salvation Army is building a home of its own and is an active worker in the community.

Ketchikan is supplied with light and power by a hydro-electric plant, which also furnishes current for cooking in many homes. The telephone system is equal to that to be found in any city. Water for all purposes is furnished from a series of beautiful lakes in the hills back of the city and is of such quality that the liquid coming from the tap is suitable for any purpose for which distilled water is demanded. This water system furnishes sufficient pressure to afford ample fire protection. In fact that protection is so good that Ketchikan has never known a serious fire.

Climatically Ketchikan has summers that compare favorably with those of the coast of Maine, cool enough to be comfortable, yet warm enough to make one realize that it is summer time. The winters compare favorably with those of Puget Sound, as the Japanese current strikes in and warms up the country considerably. The winters in Ketchikan are not as severe as those of Washington, D. C., while the summers are a joy.

For sportsmen there is a paradise in the district surrounding, where the elusive trout may be found in large numbers during the season, and where in the fall and winter the bird shooting and deer hunting are all that could be desired. And for athletics there are all the outdoor forms—baseball, tennis, swimming, rowing and others—to be found anywhere in the United States, and the same is true of the indoor sports.
